

CABINET WILL SEE JOBLESS HERE FRIDAY

Unemployed Who Marched on Legislative Buildings to Get Hearing

Unannounced and unexpected members of the Single Unemployed Protective Association Monday afternoon entered the main legislative buildings office and ascended to the fourth floor, where is located the office of the minister of public works, and then demanded an audience with Hon. W. A. Fallow, the minister.

The appearance of the men at the legislative buildings was a complete surprise.

The men had held a meeting on the market square, attended by over 1,000 members of their organization. Not having a permit for a parade they decided to march to the buildings along the sidewalks.

Accordingly they proceeded along the sidewalks west along Jasper street to the main entrance. Entering by the eastern main door, they proceeded westward through the building to the main rotunda. There they encountered John Dunlop, a doorman.

They proceeded up the main staircase to the next floor and parked themselves in the eastern wing corridor of the fourth floor. The men, on arrival at the fourth floor, demanded an audience with Hon. W. A. Fallow. They were told they could not see him at that time and they refused to leave until they did. Explaining that he was out of the city and later an audience was arranged with Hon. Ernest C. Manning, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry.

POLICE NOT NEEDED

In the meantime detachments of both the city and RCMP had arrived. They were not needed. There was not one instance of untoward incident and the police had nothing to do.

A delegation of five, representing the men, interviewed Hon. Mr. Manning and Hon. P. Keith, deputy minister of public works. Mr. Nicholson and Jack Bloom, ex-members of the association, expressed their appreciation of the tenor of the interview and the manner in which the men had conducted themselves.

The delegation said that it was desired to take exception to a story published in an Edmonton paper in which Hon. W. A. Fallow was quoted as saying that it was difficult to obtain men for highways work. The men said that they would later their objection to this and that they would be willing to go to work if it was available.

NO BASIS FOR BELIEF

Hon. Mr. Manning and Mr. Keith assured the men that there was no basis for belief that there had been no difficulty in obtaining men for highway work. The delegation was further informed that so far as single men in the city were concerned, it would be the duty of the department of highways construction under the property certificate plan to effect them.

CLOSE SOUP KITCHEN

The delegation explained that about 1,500 men had been living under the most degrading conditions at the soup kitchen during the spring and summer in the hope that the promised relief work would be put in to put the unemployed to work. The put in immediately. This hope was shattered when they were told that the relief work was being strengthened from day to day by promises of Hon. W. W. Cross, minister of health and of charge of relief and by statements of other ministers.

VENIOT DIES MONDAY NIGHT AT AGE OF 72

Former Postmaster-General of Canada Victim of Abdominal Ailment

BATHURST, N.B., July 7.—Hon. Peter John Veniot, former postmaster-general of Canada and premier of New Brunswick, died last night. He was 72.

Death of the veteran Liberal politician, present member of House of Commons for Gloucester, followed an abdominal ailment. The one-time cabinet member had been critically ill at his home here for days, with the end expected hour by hour.

BECAME UNCONSCIOUS

Last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered last Wednesday. After that, Mr. Veniot lay in state at his home here.

Monday afternoon he became unconscious. He died at 11:30 p.m.

Life ended for Mr. Veniot at his home in this little village that had been the centre of his political existence for more than 40 years.

He had been minister of public works in the federal cabinet since 1917 to 1923, then becoming its premier. His party defeated in 1923, he resigned as premier, only to be elected as member of parliament in 1925.

BRITISH PLAN IS OPPOSED BY TURKS, SOVIET

Against Keeping Black Sea Open to All Nations in War Time

MONTEUX, Switzerland, July 7.—Turkey and the Soviet Union today ranged themselves in opposition to Britain's demand that the Black Sea be kept open to all nations in time of war.

Nor did the Turks favor the British suggestion that the straits should not be closed in case of a war, and that the right to close the straits arbitrarily in time of war was displaced with the British demand for the Black Sea.

TURKEY DISPLEASED Turkey, which has proposed rigid limits on warships in the Black Sea, was displeased by the British demand for the Black Sea.

She believed it would undermine the present coalition, and would make the new Dardanelles convention dependent on its ratification by all signatories.

But that's what Edmondson's Captain John Matheson does: builds boats out of them 200 tonners. He builds the craft which ply the wilderness lakes and rivers in the Arctic coastal waters.

Painted, braided and beaming, Captain Matheson is an experienced Grand Lakes navigator and has come here to Puerto to open his Edmondson shipyard, which have produced practically every boat seen sailing the waters of the highest port.

Captain Matheson's boss job was the construction of his "Plover" — "Norland Echo" for the Northern Commercial Company — which turned his boat over to the Northern Commercial Company to ply the Waterways to Fort Fitzgerald round the Alabaska river; across the Yukon to the Klondike.

Pitchers Versus Batters Today—
Mr. O'Brien Is Fed-up
—A Reader Asks

Today in the fans' "dream game" at Boston the final result will add a lot of fresh fervor to the old baseball argument as to which is the most important factor in a win—pitching or batting power. The National League has always been more or less toward the theory that if a pitcher can push them past the man with the bat there will be no scoring done. On the other hand, the virile American circuit believes in pounding the ball first, last and all the time.

However, the National appreciates the batting power and the American knows that pitching counts, but as it happens the National will go into today's game with a distinct edge in pitching power, while the American will line up a collection of fence-busters that are formidable enough to give the most stout-hearted hurler a few seasons of jitters.

Manager Grimm of the National Stars has Dizzy Dean, Hubbell, Mungo, Wamette and Curt Davis, the right-hander who came to the rescue of the Cubs. This quintette has enough "push-em-out" power to send the average batter back to the dugout with a chill. Against these hurlers, the Americans will use Grove, Gomez, Harder, Rowe and Monte Pearson. Grove has not been doing as well lately and Gomez has not been setting anything on fire this season. Harder likewise has not been making the headlines and Rowe's arm has everyone guessing. Pearson has been winning a lot of games for the Yankees, but no one seems very optimistic about what he may do today.

However, the American League supporters merely shrug their shoulders and point to their heavy artillery—Gehrig, DiMaggio, Appling, Gehring, Fox and Averill and advise Charley Grimm to send his high-powered pitchers to the mound with shin pads on.

Bill O'Brien Is Disgusted

Bill O'Brien, the astute Irishman who made professional tennis a big business without ever having played a game in his life, is fed up on the proposition and is back at his first love, prize-fighting, for the time being at least.

O'Brien blames the pampering amateur tennis players receive for most of his trouble. "Paying tennis is just like any other sport on a money-making basis—it must have color and showmanship, but every amateur I get has the society complex and high faluting ideas. They may be all right, but they don't pack customers in," Mr. O'Brien explains.

For publicity purposes, O'Brien wanted Mrs. Ethel Burkhart Arnold to pose for a series of pictures of her in a bathing suit, but she refused to do so. He wanted her to pose in a bathing suit, but she refused to do so. He wanted her to pose in a bathing suit, but she refused to do so.

What O'Brien needs is to get a bunch of Bill Root's middleweight wrestlers and let them come out capering, Klen Kusek blasting a shot into Cummings' midriff as they met at the net, and the latter retreating by throwing a handful of shale into Kusek's eyes. "would be simply terrific!"

A Reader Wants to Know

A reader writes asking if any ball players have been imported from the East Indies and Shastha when there is promising material right here in the city that might be developed into satisfactory calibre. The answer is that it was so late in the season when the Boston Red Sox were in the city that there was no time to develop two complete teams. Seasoned players, ready to go, were needed badly. However, as many local men as possible were used among them being Sam Lugin, Wynn, Wagner, McHugh, Eaton, and Shandro and several others. Next season Dick Speer plans to hold a ball school here early in the spring and any player who has aspirations will be given every help and assistance from a coaching standpoint.

Four Fast Games In Girls' League

Community Teams Draw Large Crowds of Fans

Last night was a very happy Federation of Community Girls Softball games played. Each game drew a large attendance and enthusiasm was high.

Culver Club smashed out a 36-0 win over the Shawanago Club. The Central has been very lucky all season and were no match last night for the Runkin Youngbloods. The Plastics won for the losers, while Taylor, Cann and Yarnall were the winners.

The Chatterbox (North Edmonton) Club ended out a stirring 12-1 victory over the Highland Hawks. The Highland girls played wonderful ball and there was little choice between the teams.

Edith Oliver and Maude Hall played all right but the team was not so good. Wynne, Klingner and Dinko were some of the Caps.

The Bonnie Dunes Dynamites blasted out a 5-1 win over the Dominion Demons. But had it were all the way to do it. The Demons played all right, but just couldn't connect in the pitcher's box.

Don Lane and Shirley Loughlin were top of the line with Valpy, Guzman and E. Vaughan in the second most of the game for the Dynamites.

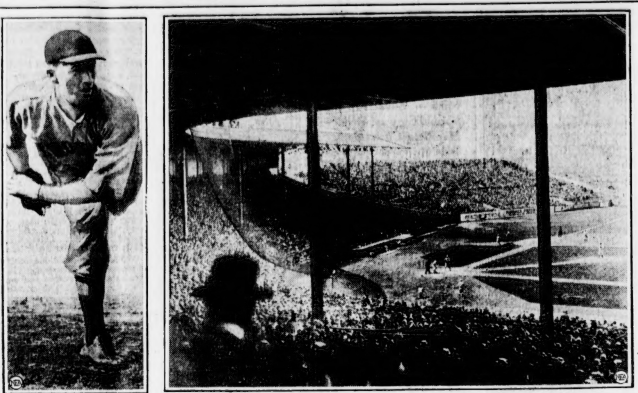

Cloverdale Canucks had a hard-fought game to Oliver by a 11-0 count. In the seventh the Canucks scored six runs and took a 10-0 lead. Oliver was sunk, but they started back to work. The Canucks emerged with a win. Flo Bishop and Noreen McLeod played superb ball for Oliver. The Canucks and Adeline Langens were the Cloverdale stars.

Baseball's Dream Game Played at Boston Today

Diamond Stars Cluster To Wage Ball Thriller Before 42,000

BOSTON, July 7.—Baseball's dream game, featuring the all-star teams of the American and National Leagues, was played today at Fenway Park. The game was a thrilling contest, with the American League winning 4-3.

Lefty Grove, pitcher for the American League, was the star of the game, pitching a complete game and allowing only three runs. He was aided by his teammates, including Gehrig, DiMaggio, and Fox.

The National League team, led by Dizzy Dean, put up a strong fight, but ultimately fell to the American League. The game was a classic example of the "dream game" concept, featuring the best players from both leagues.

The game was attended by a record crowd of over 42,000 fans. The atmosphere was electric, and the game was a true spectacle for baseball fans everywhere.

The American League's victory was a testament to their pitching and defense. Lefty Grove's performance was particularly noteworthy, as he held the National League batters at bay for most of the game.

The game was a highlight of the baseball season, and it is expected to be remembered for years to come. The players' performance was exceptional, and the fans' enthusiasm was palpable.

The game was a true testament to the sport of baseball, and it showed that the "dream game" concept is still valid. The players' performance was a credit to their teams and to the sport.

The game was a great success, and it was a pleasure to watch the best players in the world compete. The fans' reaction was a testament to the popularity of the sport.

Cream of Shotmakers Seek Provincial Golf Titles

NASHVILLE, July 7.—Nashville's hard-bitten southern association club found three hurlers for 12 hits last night to defeat Cincinnati Reds of the National League, 5-2, before 2,000 fans.

It was the first time in the history of the southern association that a major league team of the south to play an exhibition game during the season.

Chief event on the program is the provincial amateur championship, the qualifying round of which starts at 8 a.m. Thursday. Steve Vickers, who has held the title in 1932, 1933 and again in 1935 will be defending against a brilliant field.

The high-powered stars from each of Edmonton's five clubs will be shooting for the title with Henry Martell, city champion, rated as the man to beat.

Following are the details of the program:
THURSDAY, JULY 8
8:00 a.m.—Qualifying round of the Amateur Championship and first round of the Open Championship.

2:00 p.m.—Second round of the Amateur Championship and second round of the Open Championship, followed by the qualifying round of the Junior Championship.

FRIDAY, JULY 9
8:00 a.m.—First round of the Amateur Championship and all first round of the Open Championship.

10:30 a.m.—First round of Professional Championship and first round of the Amateur Championship.

SATURDAY, JULY 10
9:00 a.m.—Third round of the Amateur Championship and all first round of the Open Championship.

2:00 p.m.—Fourth round of the Amateur Championship and second round of the Open Championship.

SUNDAY, JULY 11

Defending Champs Lose Close Match To Hoyle and Muir

Leo Lemieux Fights Way Into Eight Beating Art Stott

Seeded stars continued to fall in the annual Edmonton District Tennis championships now in progress at the Gimora Club courts, 128 street, during the Monday draws and the one major upset occurred when the defending champions, Hoyle and Muir, were defeated by the newcomers, Leo Lemieux and Art Stott, in a thrilling encounter all the way through, with the champions unable to break through the formidable net barrier thrown up by Hoyle-Muir.

RARE TREASURES
The gallery was given a rare treat in seeing the defending title holders bowled from their throne in the second round and by an unexpected team. It is a pity that the match was not studied by the men on the sidelines, as the Hoyle-Muir team were defeated by the newcomers, Leo Lemieux and Art Stott, in a thrilling encounter all the way through, with the champions unable to break through the formidable net barrier thrown up by Hoyle-Muir.

It seemed like another victory for the Hoyle-Muir team, but in the first set, they led 3-2, and had set point. They had command of the match until that time, when something happened. They lost their "chance" and the game was theirs. Gradually Hoyle-Muir climbed up and a ding-dong battle occurred for the set, but finally went to Hoyle-Muir 11-9.

Hoyle-Muir came back like a Missouri mule and ran through the second set, but in the third set, they lost exactly two points almost a record for the set. The first four games without the loss of a point and dropped one point in the fifth set. The next two games were won by Hoyle-Muir.

Several other splendid matches were witnessed. Tommy Chambers reached the quarter-finals after a hard-fought battle with the veteran Caselman at 6-1, 7-5.

Fred Mitchell won over Paris at 6-1, 7-5. Leo Lemieux fought his way into the eight by a stinging win over the pole-sitter Art Stott.

Roger Adams advanced at the expense of Harvey Normanton to the quarter-finals. Many other fine matches were played, and the tournament was a success. There will be many other splendid ones.

There are Monday's results and today's draw.

A BEDTIME STORY

Story by HAL COCHRANE Pictures by GEORGE SCARBO

The poor black cloud made faces and exclaimed, "Oh, how long can I stand this squeaking in the wringer? This is not one bit of fun. Please hurry, now and get me through. That's all I will ask of you." "Okay," the princess answered. "But this task must be well done."

(READ THE STORY THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

"You see, we're going to make you white. Then everything will be all right. You've kicked because you're black, and you will not kick any more."

"In just a very little while, instead of frowning you will smile. When you are through the wringer, I've another plan in store."

"And then to Scouty she cried out. "Of course I do, the fool replied. "Just order me around."

"The princess stepped right back. "That's grand! Now right to the plane and, if you will, AROUND, A PAIR OF WHITE PAINT WILL BE FOUND."

Off went Scouty, on the run. He thought, son we will said, "He's wrong out, now, so go ahead, someone, and start the painting. Do not splash it on your clothes."

"I'll try my luck," said Scouty. "Gee, our friend, the black cloud, soon will be a very clean, but funny looking fellow, goodness knows."

"The cloud kept frowning for a while, and then its face spread in a smile. Why, say, he said, "I guess your plan will work out splendidly."

"Don't leave a bit of black on me. Make me as white as white can be. Then I will be a cloud that everyone will like to see."

"The black cloud became a pure white cloud in the next story."

HOUSE OF SHADOWS

By IDA R. GLEASON

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CLAIRE FORDICK, just out to drive to the lonely mountain home of her mother, LYMAN FORDICK, Claire is trying to find the woman in the mirror. She also hopes to find a valuable and mysterious old diary which she has heard and believed to be hidden in the house.

Her car is wrecked by a log across the road. PAT MAGAN, an old friend, and BOB STEELE, young engineer, arrive in the evening and take Claire to the mountain house where LYMAN FORDICK and his sister, SUZIE, are believed to have lived.

There was a curious arrow carved into the wall of the house. The arrow and lamp in hand, follows the arrow to the cupola. A residence built and shatters the lamp.

Next morning the spirit disappears. Bob Steele sets out for the village to find a doctor seriously injured.

HANNAH, Claire's housekeeper, arrives. Pat, trying to solve some of the mysteries of the house, enters into a deserted room. An unseen voice tells Pat of his fate.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

CLAIRE walked alone at Bob Steele's bedside. Hannah had gone to get a room ready for herself and Suze. Claire busy about her kitchen duties. A forbidding stillness hung over the old house. Only the sound of the clock in the pine tree and the faint, unending dripping of the pipes could be heard. Claire moved to the window, hoping to see Pat. But he was not there. As she came back to the side of the bed, she noticed that his eyelids fluttered. She laid her hand on his forehead.

"Claire," white lips formed the words.

"Yes, Bob. I'm here. What is it?"

"Dear, I—I—love you," the murmur trailed into silence, and Claire knew he was still unconscious.

For a minute she stood looking down at Bob in amazement. Of course it was only delirium. But didn't know what he was saying. She turned away and caught a glimpse of herself in the mirror of an ancient dressing table. If only those young men were in love with her when she was practically married to Rick. But what a mess, what a dreadful mess! It had all become!

Her thoughts were broken by the sound of the door opening. Hannah beckoned her from the room. She led Claire to the recess of a deep bay window.

"I caught her red-handed going through your bag," she whispered.

"What do you mean, Hannah?"

"Just what I'm saying! I came into your room and there was Suze, rummaging round in your things. She looked scared and said you went her for something."

Claire shook her head. "No, that was her own idea. But I can't imagine what she was after. I never let her do anything like that before."

Hannah shrugged. "I never have put anything past that woman."

"Oh, well, you're prejudiced, Hannah. But I'll speak to Suze about it. She walked back to Bob's room, more disturbed than she wanted the maid to know. For some time she had been conscious of a growing suspicion of Suze, and this time she did not try to lessen the feeling. She determined to have a straight talk with Suze as soon as she could leave Bob. She had promised Pat to stay until he came back."

But the hours went by and Pat did not return. At last Claire called Hannah and went downstairs. She found the door open. The house seemed deserted. Dan Dallas had been sent down to the village for supplies, but where had the housekeeper disappeared, and why didn't Pat come back?

Claire turned her steps toward the little cabin where Dallas stayed. She skirted the open grove, aware of a growing uneasiness, and hurried on to the cabin. To her surprise the door was partly open. She hesitated, and after knocking twice, went in. In the room was there. Dan Dallas' possessions were arranged neatly, everything was scrupulously clean.

"Must have had military training," thought Claire as she noted how precisely his shoes were lined up and how carefully she saw in one corner his gun. She picked up and looked at it curiously. Was this the gun Pat had quailed Dallas' the night before? She put it back, just as she had found it.

Giving another hasty glance around, she went out quickly and closed the door behind her. As she stood on the doorstep a rat crept down at her from the log above her head. At her slight movement it scurried out of sight, but the next moment something rolled over the edge of the roof and dropped at her feet, evidently dislodged by the tiny animal's tail.

Claire picked it up curiously, then gazed at it wide-eyed. A slender for a gun. She remembered having seen one in a play. What was it doing in Dallas' room? The shot that had killed the watch dog, and came so near to mauling her life had been fired from a weapon with a slender. There was no other way to account for the lack of sound. Dan would have explained this to everyone's satisfaction or else—

Claire hastened back toward the house. As she came within sight of the main door she saw a figure carrying a small, covered tray from her arm an unlighted lantern was awaiting. Something in the housekeeper's manner made Claire draw back behind a tree to watch her. What on earth could Suze explain this at this time of day? The answer was given when the woman walked quickly to a little red cellar at the back of the house and disappeared down the fiery light of stone steps.

Claire promptly followed. The cellar had always held a fascination for her ever since her little girl days. Now a familiar confusion rushed up to meet her, mingled with an earthly glow.

The cellar was very large and so cool that pieces of meat, securely wrapped with oiled paper, hanging from the rafters. But for vegetables took up one side of the room. Along the other side was built a huge wooden cupboard. Inside, Claire knew, were shelves holding neatly
